Texas Pipeline Association Chair Shelli Myers Published in World Pipelines April Edition

AUSTIN, Texas [April 20, 2026] – The Texas Pipeline Association (TPA) today announced that Chair Shelli Myers has been published in the April edition of World Pipelines, a leading global energy trade publication.

In the op-ed, “Texas Runs on the Infrastructure We Don’t See,” Myers highlights the critical role pipelines play in safely and efficiently delivering the energy that powers homes, fuels economic growth and supports modern industry across Texas and the nation.

“Pipelines are foundational to Texas’ continued growth and reliability,” said Myers. “As demand rises – from population growth to energy-intensive sectors like advanced manufacturing and data centers – it is essential that we invest in and maintain the infrastructure that keeps our state moving.”

The piece underscores Texas’ leadership in pipeline safety and innovation, noting the state’s early adoption of comprehensive integrity management programs and ongoing industry investments in monitoring technology, maintenance and workforce training. It also addresses the growing need for additional infrastructure capacity amid rising demand and evolving regulatory and permitting challenges.

Myers further emphasizes the importance of predictable, science-based policy and increased public engagement to ensure infrastructure development keeps pace with Texas’ rapid growth.

The full op-ed is available in the April edition of World Pipelines. See page 23.
